Kian's Reflection

When I joined Troop 570, I was a nervous and anxious boy who had trouble socializing. But with the help of my few friends, and the older scouts, I was able to step out of my shell and become the person that I am today.

I began my scouting career in Cub Scouts, where I learned the basic and necessary skills to transition into Boy Scouts. There, I caught a snippet of what Boy Scouts was like and embraced my desire to become one.

Throughout my scouting career I met close friends and learned about leadership, friendship, and the scout oath and law.

What I learned through Boy Scouts will most certainly aid me throughout the rest of my life.

Kian's Eagle Project

For my Eagle Project, I designed, and with the help of the troop, assembled four large wheelable bins to assist in the allocation of donations into their respective places to create a larger storage space for Friends of Youth.

Friends of Youth is a not-for-profit organization focused on assisting and housing at-risk and foster youth. I had previously volunteered with Friends of Youth for three years before my Eagle Project. After spending time sorting through their donations, I learned that employees were forced to hire volunteers to unclutter their donation space due to their own inability to do so during work hours. Working with Friends of Youth, I chose to address this problem by preparing large bins that sorted the donations into four categories chosen by Friends of Youth. I added wheels to mobilize them so that it would be easier to transport a large amount of donations.

With the project approved by the Scout Council and the beneficiary (Friends of Youth), I commenced the project. I anticipated many of the challenges encountered during the build and came prepared in case of an emergency or dilemma while assembling the bins. Since the beneficiary explained that we were not allowed to use power tools within their building, scouts used manual screwdrivers for the duration of the project.

Like all projects, not everything went according to plan. When issues arose during the project that I did not anticipate, I was forced to improvise and communicate my ideas to the scouts and adults. In the end, it was rewarding to witness my ideas and the project came together very quickly and eloquently.

With the help of all the Troop 570 Scoutmasters, Troop 570 scouts, friends, and family, I have succeeded in obtaining my Eagle rank. Thank you.
