A Backpacking Trip to Remember

I chose to go to Mt. Saint Helens with my troop for a 4-day backpacking trip because I like hiking and backpacking a lot both with my family and my troop.

I enjoyed going on the trip because it was challenging both in distance and elevation, it was an area that I had not hiked before, and it was the longest backpacking trip that I had done before. On our second day we hiked over twelve hours! But the reward was the third day hanging in the water at Chocolate Falls when we finished early in the afternoon.

Some challenges that I faced were that I was carrying too much weight on the first day and part of the second day. Also, I struggled a lot because this was the longest hike that I had done before with it being miles of rough terrain in 3 days. I am happy that I accomplished this, and it will encourage me to do others in the future.

Ian's Eagle Project

For my Eagle Project, I wanted to do an improvement to St. Edward State Park on the North trail, because it is close to my home, and I like to hike there a lot. We added timber steps, an improved drainage trench and a tube to help divert water on the trail. This way it would be easier to walk down and help reduce erosion. This was important because when I went on the trail while we were looking at it during the planning, I saw a big puddle blocking the trail below, and a path people had made off the trail that I wanted to fix so people could use the trail safely.

Some adults that really made a difference for my project were Mr. Quinn, who offered a lot of advice for my planning, and Mr. Mayberry recruited his adult volunteer group to bring the cubic yard of gravel a half mile down the trail to my project site.

Another thing that went well for my project is that the other scouts and adults that came on Saturday did such a great job and worked so hard, we were able to finish that day, and I didn't need my Sunday (Mother's Day) crew. So, my family was able to have a breakfast picnic that day by the water, and hike back up and admire the completed project.
